INTRODUCTION

Teaching is a social process in which teacher influences the behaviour of the less experienced student and helps him develop according to the needs of the society. But teaching aptitude means an interest in the orientation of the teaching work and also of implementing teaching principles and methods. Teaching skill occupies a major place in the area of teaching aptitude. It is well-known that every student is different according to his intelligence, aptitude and interest. A teacher has to solve the various problems of his students on the basis of his knowledge, experience, vision and understanding. This vision along with the understanding of a teacher is known as teaching aptitude.

Under a particular situation, different students may have different perceptions, actions, reactions and conceptions to a given topic or subject. Effecting coordination among them could be a very difficult task in that event. The aptitude of the teacher is applied to test only on such occasions. None of the training schedules or principles help the teacher in this evaluation; only the intelligence and presence of mind of the teacher can save him. Teaching is both an art and science. It calls the exercise of talent and creativity.
